POLITICAL NOTES.

—The Legislature has been in session over eleven weeks.

—Is the future French monarchy hidden beneath the veil of T(h)iers?

—The rock upon which the English cabinet failed to split—Glad-stone.

—The newly elected senator from Massachusetts came out of the Bout-well.

—Gen. Spinner has just entered upon his thirteenth year of service as Treasurer of the United States.

—The queen promptly accepted Gladstone's resignation and he is on longer "loafing 'round the throne."

—The fish question is a good deal talked of now, and Senator Petriken's fish bill is favorably commented on.

—About the only successful strike for higher wages known in recent history was that of the late congress.

—When Mark Twain lectures on the Sandwitch Islands, a wel. bred audience is ways mustered to hear him. A-hem!

—People are always anxious to be posted on the news. Stokes is not one of that kind. With him no noose is good news.

—The Pennsylvania Legislature will adjourn finally on the 10th of April, according to a resolution passed by that body.

—Members of Congress who sign receipts for the wages voted to themselves by themselves are said to do it with a steal pen.

—More is made of the appointment of Fred Grant to a position on the staff of Gen. Sheridan than there is any use of. It is only a common inci-Dent.

—Gen. Sherman thinks that a settlement can be made with the Modoc Indians through the Peace Commissioners as now reorganized.

—Western newspapers state that freights have been pretty generally started for the seaboard, and money is gradually became more plentiful.

—The reported invasion of Mexico by Fillibusters is probably without foundation. The relations between Mexico and our own country are cordial.

— A bill for the immediate abolition of Slavery in Porto Rico has passed the Spanish Assembly by a unanimous vote. Thirty thousand slaves are at once to be set free.

—Judge Shannon, of Pittsburg, has been nominated by the President for the Chief Justiceship of Dekota. The Judge's legal training fits him well for the position.

—The german papers say that the inscription over the door of the infernal rejions no longer reads "abandon hope all ye that enter here" but has been changed to "Ici on parle Francias."

—A man in a western county is involved in a law suit for refusing to pay for his own coffin. The man who will die and then meanly refuse to pay for his own coffin, should have died years before he did.

—Governor Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, is winning golden praises from the papers of both parties for his stern and fearless vetoing of improper legislation, particularly that of the "special" order.—New York World.

—The largest number of dismissals ever made by any President at one time will be on he 5th of May, when sixteen hundred Assessors and Assistant Assessors of Internal Revenue will be discharged. There will probably be some grumbling about that time.

—Governor Hartranft has vetoed the bill appropriating seventy-five thousand dollars for the relief of the sufferers by the Somerset fire, on the grounds that such appropriations do not come within the sphere or duty of government, and are contrary to sound public policy.

—Another man has graduated at the Yale "School of Journalism." He has been rather more successful than any of his predecessors. When he found that he could get no more than eight dollars a week on any Western journal, he went right away and got a position as a clerk in an oyster saloon, where his weekly stipend is ten dollars.

JOHN B. LINN, ESQ., who was, some time since, appointed Depaty Secretary of the Commonwealth by Governor Hartranft, leaves this week to assume the duties of the office. In this appointment as in most others that he has made, the Governor has displayed the sagacity and good judgment which are laying the foundations for a successful, popular and honest administration. Mr. Linn goes to a position for which he is admirably fitted in very many ways, and in which he will have rare opportunities for indulging some of his special delights of investigation and study. He takes with him the well-wishes of all citizens. His family, we understand, will remain in Bellefonte, at least part of the time.

WE stated, last week, upon what we regarded as good authority, that the location of the car manufactory of which we have lately heard so much, was definitely fixed at Milesburg. We are pleased to learn from an authentic and authoritative source, that such is not the case. The advantages of this vicinity are conceded by the parties who contemplate establishing this enterprise, and its location will depend entirely upon the number and kind of advantages offered by the several localities interested. If Bellefonte offers sufficient inducements, and the other advantages of neighborhood and materials are equal to those of Milesburg, she will secure the car works.—The gentleman who is to make the examination as to these several items, and report to those interested, will be here before long. Let us see to it that we furnish him all the information needed to enable him to make an intelligent report, and be ready to make a definite proposition for a site for the shops. We are glad to learn that such favorable progress has been made in the effort to raise money for the purchase of land for this purpose. It can safely be said now that Bellefonte offers the ground necessary for the establishment of this enterprise, for nothing. Can she not, and ought she not, make a standing offer of this kind for any manufacturing establishment which would agree to locate here and employ fifty workmen?

YESTERDAY was a busy one, not only to those who changed their local habitations, but to almost every business man. April 1st is one of those periodical occasions that brings with it its pleasures and discomforts, and it has proved to be "all fools' day" to many a luckless wight whom necessity or the landlord's mandate, compels to change his place of abode. Hunting houses suitable in every particular, involves no little trouble, vexation of spirit, expenditure of time and money and not a few ejaculations that would not look well in print. Investing in a house, either by renting or purchasing, is like taking a chance in a lottery, or hunting for the "little joker" in the perusal of the history of the Four Kings.

Moving day brings with it gleams of sunshine mingled with its shades and shadows. Bidding the old homestead, around which cluster so many pleasant and touching memories, so many pangs of regret to moisten the eyes of those bidding farewell to familiar spots and objects, is someting of a trial to anybody.

Quite a number of caravans passed through our streets yesterday with their household idols, bedding, broken crockery and mirrors, disabled furniture and live stock. We pited them, wondering how they would enjoy the first cold meal, strange lodgings and the wear and tear of the "new departure" generally.

Business men are busy, too, in fixing up their general settlements, trying to make their ledger pages look clean and nice by erasing old scores.

The amount of money, notes, &c., which changed hands, could not well be estimated by anybody but our bankers. We met the enemy, same as did our ancestors of yore, and passed through the ordeal without a "flash in the pan" or a "jar in the family," and such, we hope, has been the good fortune of all our subscribers.

ATTENTION TAXPAYERS.

The conscience of the Editor of the "Democratic Watchman" seems to be troubled that other journals of the county are said to have recieved trifling compensation for printing done for the county, and he makes an offer something about furnishing his paper, containing legal advertisements, to the Republicans of the county, if this and certain other journals will only cease complaining that the tax-payers are made to pay too much for county printing, almost all of which, most unfairly, goes to the support of a journal that the people do not care to read, and many of whom never see.

Now we offer that, if the county officials will pay to us the same now paid to the "Democratic Watchman," over and above what the tax payers should pay for legal advertising, we will furnish the readers of that journal with a copy of the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN the best paper published in the county, with a copy each of the Farmers' Almanac for 1873, and a new corn broom, either of which will be more useful in a family than a copy of "Watchman"—and at the same time, do the legal printing for the county for nothing. But in doing so, we will not consent to abate one jot of our purpose to stand by the rights of the tax payers and to see that they are not imposed upon, in this matter of legal printing, as in times past, for the support of a journal which labors in vain.

GOV. HARTRANFT'S ADMINISTRATION.

It is a noticable fact that many of those who, before the election, heaped abuse and ridicule upon the head of General Hartranft, are already shamed to silence by the Governor's straightforward course, while some have completely turned over and are uttering peans of praise. This is, perhaps, as fair criticism, and possibly as good assurance as the Governor might ask; but it, nevertheless becomes his supporters, and the Republican party at large, that they keep close up with him in his statesmanlike course, and, by approval, sustain him in all that is right—if the necessity arises—condemn the wrong.

From the fact that some from our own ranks prophecied corruption, dishonesty and misfortune, should we consent to elect Hartranft, does the necessity become greater that we should watch for the fruit by which the Governor himself, and in some degree the party, shall be known.

Entering upon official duties when a cabinet is to be formed, and men appointed to office, from names presented by different factions of the party, is at best hazardous to perfect harmony, yet, through this ordeal the Governer has passed quite successfully. The party, with great unanimity, have accepted all the appointments thus far made, and virtually approved of them, looking still, however, to the Governor's responsibility.

Encountering, right at the start, what almost every Governor in the land must encounter, the demand for special legislation, through which corporations hope to rival and surpass, if not overthrow each other, and by which districts, boroughs, towns and cities aim to secure commercial and political advantages, the Governor has come manfully to the front and put down his foot, declaring quite distinctly, his policy to be, that for the good of the whole only shall laws be made.

Both Houses of the Legislature recently passed, unanimously, an act conceding to one of the leading corporations of the State, the privilede, for all time, to increase its capital stock to an unlimited amount. Unanimously they agreed that if the corporation saw fit it might, in the future, possess, wield and control more capital than all other corporations within and without the State combined; it might, in financial power, outvie the State itself, and, while money remained king, soon become dictator. But when this mistaken legislation reached the Governor's hands he gave the friends of the bill to understand that not while he was Governor could such a measure become a law of this Commonwealth. By a resolution the bill was recalled, the amount of increase of capital stock was limited, and the people of Pennsylvania assured that their Governor possesses the virtue to resist what their Legislature failed to resist.

THE population of Bellefonte in 1860 was 1345, in 1870, 2655. An increase of nearly 100 per cent is a very wealthy growth in ten years. If the interprise of our people were commensurate with our natnatural advantage the per-centage of increase in the next ten years would be very much greater. We must offer such inducements to capital as will attract it to our coal, iron and lumber, and a continuation of these elements will bring population and healthy trade.

The Census taker gives us some interesting facts and figures, illustrating the growth of our County. Centre County being organized in the year 1800, its population in the census for that year is enumerated with that of Mifflin County. The census of 1810 is the first one in which Centre County appears separated in its enumeration, from all others. From that time its growth in population is shown by the following figures.

1810	Population	10,681
1820	"	13,796
1830	"	18,879
1840	"	20,499
1850	"	22,558
1860	"	27,000
1870	"	26,423

It will be seen from these figures that the greatest growth of population was from 1820 to 1830 and from 1860 to 1870. The increase in the last decade is the more remarkable from the fact that Centre County lost more men in the late war in proportion to her population than perhaps any other County in the commonwealth.

KENTUCKY.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

LOUISVILLE, March 28.

The negro, Thos. Smith, was hung today for the murder of Joseph Braden in May, 1871, twelve miles below this city. The prisoner asserted his innocence, even in prayers on the scaffold, until told to take his stand under the trap, when he confessed his guilt.

The execution took place on the open commons south of the city, in the presence of probably seven thousand people. The murderer's neck was dislocated by a fall of thirty inches. He labored under high excitement on the scaffold. Smith's wife was at the execution in a carriage, and witnessed the entire scene.

ALLEGED PLOT TO RESCUE A CONDEMNED MURDERER.

LOUISVILLE, March 28.

Thomas Smith, murderer of Thomas Braden, in May, 1871, who was hanged here to-day, held interviews in the jail yesterday with the reporters of the papers here.

Some time ago Smith rubbed croton oil on his face and person, producing blisters which resembled small-pox eruptions, and complained of pains in back and head. The jail physician, Dr. Pope, and another physician, pronounced it a case of small-pox, and Smith was removed to the Eruptive Hospital, from which he escaped a few hours after his arrival, and was recaptured.

Yesterday Smith wrote a statement, which appears in the city papers this morning, that he paid Dr. Pope $12 for furnishing him with the croton oil and sending him to the pest house.

He said he knew that he had to die to-day, and would not die with a lie on his lips; that his statement was true, and he would re-assert it on the scaffold to-day.

It is said that Dr. Pope has the affidavits of other prisoners, stating that Smith told them a different story.

[COMMUNICATED.

"THE REV. MR. WYLIE, SITTING ON SOMEBODYS SCONCE."

One of the most ridiculous exhibitions of self sufficiency and cowardly spite that it has been my privilege to witness, in many a long day, will be apparent to any one who will peruse two communications contributed to the "Democratic Watchman" over the signature of "Independent." It seems that the Rev. Mr. Wylie, took occasion recently to say something to his own congregation on the subject of the Credit Mobilier scandal, and at the same time to pencil out the marvelous evidences with which dealers in scandal, and defamers of reputation, seized upon the slightest breath of suspicion against professors of religion to hurl their anathemas at them, and to enjoin upon his people the necessity of a most prayerful attention, at all times, to their walk and conversation. In this connection Mr. Wylie also stated that he was not yet convinced of the alleged guilt of Schuyler Colfax, an opinion in which it seems the President of the United States, as well as all of the community in which Mr. Colfax resides, fully concur. For the exercise of such independent priviliges, rankling under some imagined personal grievances that he displays toward Mr. Wylie, the Watchman barks at him with the viciousness of an unruly cur, and, in most arrogant tone, elects himself public censor of the pulpit. His statements of what Mr. Wylie did say, and his omission of the religious precepts he sought to inculcate, are as loose and striking as his facts about the Credit Mobilier scandal are mistaken. A single illistration will suffice: "I say," says Independent, "that the Mobilier was a systematic fraud to swindle the Government." Now it so happened that the Credit Mobilier Company never had a single transaction with the Government; its business operations were wholly with the Union Pacific R. R. Company, and the enormity of the evil committed by the members of Congress, in dealing with it, was most strikingly illustrated in the case of Mr. Brooks, the Democrat from New York city, to whom Mr. Wylie, did not refer, who, while a member of Congress, was also appointed by the Government, a director in the Union Pacific R. R. Company; and who, notwithstanding this double obligation to protect the interests of the Government, because a partner in the Credit Mobilier Company, which he knew was pocketing the bonds and property given by the Government to the encouragement and support of the Union Pacific Company, and their attempted concealment of the facts by first putting his own interest in the name of his son-in-law, and afterwards testifying that he never had any interest in it.

But the most pitiable mistake of "Independent" is the self-evident conceit that he is a writer of ability, which, to keep alive and to gratify, he rushes into print for the ignoble purpose of personal abuse, a style that one so meagre in language and humble in thought, should never attempt. And even on the head of this conceit he may lay claim to an advantage over Dogberry, who, while berating gentlemen, sighed to find his secretary not present to write him down an ass.

Mr. Wylie, I hope, will pardon me for noticing what should fall below respectful notice; but my object is, in this public manner, to request of him that he will sit more lightly upon this Sir Oracle, so that when again he speaks, not even a dog may bark.

Poetry.

FATHER, THY WILL BE DONE.

BY MRS. FANCY T. MUNROE

Father, thy will be done! O, since that hour
Of agony, within the garden's shade,
When these deep words fell from his sainted lips,
O, from how many hearts has this one prayer
Gone up to heaven; and from the very depth
Of souls o're-fraught with anguish, have these words
Of resignation risen unto God!
There are some sorrows man can proudly bear,
They nerve his soul to action, and he goes
Forth to the world's stern conflict, and his brow
Is calm as ever, and eye dims not,—
The deep resolve is in his heart, to bear
With manly strength his grief, so that the world
May see and praise his fortitude. For this
He forces back all sorrowing thoughts, for this
He rushes forth into the world to drown
His grief. 'Tis not for hearts so touched to breathe
This prayer of resignation and of trust,
Father thy will be done! Thou pale, sad one,
Thou with the earnest gaze, the hectic cheek,
The feeble, faltering step, and wasted form;—
Who seemest to look with thy prophetic eye,
Into the spirit-land,—who see'st now
The shadow of the angle's darkening wing,
Upon the path, and as it draws more near,
Lifteth thy heart to heaven, and meekly prays,
Father, thy will be done.
O, I have seen the mourner,—she who wept
For her first-born! O, I have seen her stand
And gaze upon her cherished one, and take
His clay-cold hands in hers, and part the curls
From his clear, marble brow, and while the tears
Fell from her streaming eyes, and while heart
Was heavy with its anguish, she did kneel
Beside her dead, and prayed with faltering voice,
Father, thy will be done!
And I have seen the strong man bowed with grief
And tears were in the eyes that seldom wept,
And sighs were breaking from the o'er-burdened heart,
Ay, he had murmured at the bitter cup,
And dark stern thoughts had struggled in his soul,
But now came visions of an angel form,
With her soft, pleading eyes and glorious smile,
And the proud man was gentle as a child,
And bowed himself unto the chastening rod
And humbly prayed, Father, thy will be done!
The little child learns at its mother's knee
This simple prayer, Father, thy will be done;
And when he kneels above that mothers grave,
And the pale stars look down upon him there,
This prayer is on his lips. Then years roll on
And manhood sets his seal upon his brow;
His soul is strong, his eye is glorious
With the light of genius and of knowledge;—
But the sad angel passes not his door.
Again he kneels, though with a sadder heart,
And prays, Father, thy will be done. Then age
Comes on, his form is bowed, his step is weak,
Furrows are on his glorious brow, his eyes
Are dim and sightless, and as the old man
Feels that death is near, how joyfully
He lifts his sightless eyes to heaven, and prays!
With his last breath, Father, thy will be done

Our Story Teller.

MY GRANDFATHER'S PIPE.

For generations my ancestors had traded from Holland to various countries. But I'll pass them all by until I come down to my grandfather whose name was Jacob Vanderheyden. My father married his daughter, and eventually come back to live in this, his native city, for he was a German. I recollect grandfather Vanderheyden very well, though I was only seven years of age when he died. He was an immensely fat old man, weighing nearly three hundred pounds, and wearing big shirt collars that reached up high above his ears. He began life by sailing to Japan, and never, I believe, made any voyages save to that country. His ship used to lay at Boompjes in Rotterdam. It was where he lived.

My grandfather, as you may suppose, saved up a goodly pile of money, and was considered by the people as being well off. I have often been told that previous to his last voyage he had a remarkable dream, in which he was informed that great good was to come to him when he arrived in port, but that he must never go to sea again, for if he did so he would be overcome by evil. He accordingly made all his preparations to retire from maritime life, and sailed away with high hope in his heart. My mother told me that it was more than two years ere the herring fleet, at Vhaardingen descried his vessel returning to port. It must have been a jolly day when grandfather jumped ashore at the Boompjes. They say he was so much altered they could scarcely recognize him. He had grown enormously fat, and was as yellow as saffron. Well, he was as good as his promise; he gave up sea and settled down on the land. But he brought a strange story with him, which certainly verified his dream. He was in possession of a diamond of most superb beauty and great value. I have heard it said that Count Albert Kalosks home from Paris and offered to pay forty thousand francs for it, but my grandfather would not sell it, supposing he would obtain a much greater sum when he was ready to sell.

My grandfather was a peculiar man; he would not trust the gem in the possession of any bank, preferred to keep it in his own custody. His friends often told him he would be robbed, for it was soon noised about that he had the stone in his house. But the old man laughed when he heard the advice, and would not give up the prize to any other custody. There are various stories told as to how he came to be possessed of the jewel, but his own version was that a certain native of Japan took refuge in his ship and fled the country. The unhappy man fell sick unto death, and as my grandfather attended him with great kindness, he gave him the treasure before he died, and in this way he became possessor. Some ill-natured people said that the truth were known it would be found that grandfather Vanderheyden had entered into a compact with the Evil One to secure the wealth. Of course none but superstitious old women listened to stories like these, and they did not affect my grandfather's good name in the community. I can see him now, sitting on the bench, with his old pipe, smoking away, apparently in a dream; but he never was caught napping when smoking; he was two shrewd a man, for you must understand the diamond was concealed in the cavity of the knot in his pipe. My father and mother were the only ones to whom he imparted the secret. He reasoned in this way:

"If," said he, "thieves break into my house, they will ransack every nook and corner where they suppose valuables would be concealed, but this old pipe might lie about anywhere, and no one would take the trouble to carry it off, for you see it's worth nothing at all. Its insignificance is its protection."

And so he concealed the diamond in his pipe, and made his mind easy. But at length the predictions of his friends began to prove true. Thrice was his house broken into, and although something valuable was carried away each time; the great prize was not discovered. Grandfather at length began to be worried, and saw, when it was too late, that it would have been more prudent to have kept silent regarding his jewel. His mind grew uneasy, yet with strange inconsistency, he would not sell his diamond, because he could not obtain the price he asked, and he considered it more valuable than it really was.

One day he said to my father, "I am distressed that there are so many bad men in the world who desire to rob me of my wealth. Where shall we live and find virtuous people."

My father quickly replied, "My countrymen are honest, and never was a robbery heard of in the town of Freising; you might leave a sack of gold on your doorstep at night and find it safe in the morning."

"Is that so?" inquired my grandfather.

"Of a truth it is," responded my father.

"Then I will go to your country," said my grandfather, and he soon after sold off his property and came hither.

But thieves are rarely at fault. They quickly heard that a removal was contemplated, and had no trouble, I imagine in tracing us to this city, though it was never known how they did so, for grandfather and his family were careful not to mention their future abode.

Scarcely had he got settled in our new home ere an attempt was made to break into our house. My father urged grandfather to sell the diamond, as we never should be free from robbery until he did so. But the old man was stubborn, and refused. Moreover he was getting well on in years, and was cross and ill-natured.

Months passed away, and we were free from robbers, so that we thought they had departed and would trouble, us no more. Grandfather became more amiable, and talked and smoked with more pleasure than he hitherto had done. We were sure that at last we were safe, when one morning, soon after my father arose, he came running into our bedroom saying that the house had been broken into during the night. My mother ran to grandfathers's chamber, and had to break open the door ere she could gain admittance. The poor old man lay tied upon his bed with a gag in his mouth. His face was livid and the veins in his throat were swollen purple. The robber had escaped by the window of his room.

"It's all over," he moaned, as soon as he was able to speak, "It's all over now. We are ruined. All I wish to do is to die. They carried off my pipe. Woe is me."

The account he gave was this: he was awakened by a heavy hand on his throat and the next moment he found himself in the presence of three masked men, who spoke to him in Dutch, and demanded to know where the diamond was concealed.

"In the bank," he replied.

"Thou liest," returned the one who held a lantern to his face. "Not a word from thy lips," and they forthwith gagged him and commenced to search his room.

Failing to secure the prize, they took his watch and some money, and were departing, when one of the rascals spied his pipe.

"Ah! that will do for me," he said; "'tis an ugly old thing, but will answer my purpose," and ignorant of the wealth he held in his hand, the scoundrel proceeded to fill it with tobacco, and lighting it, passed with his comrades out of the window, bidding my grandfather good night.

Bound hand and foot, and unable to move, my grandfather was forced to witness the robbery without the power of being able to make an effort to regain his property.

So great was the effect on his system that he commenced to fall at once. His appetite, hitherto good, was now gone. He could not sleep, and soon was ill. Gradually growing worse day by day, he died within six months, repeating with his last breath, "It is all over now—we are all ruined."

To say my father and mother did not share my grandfather's grief would be false. My father made an accurate drawing of the pipe and deposited it with my mother, and then took to roaming over the country, and making acquaintance with the lowest and worst people to be found, in hopes of finding the pipe. Notwithstanding he traveled through Germany and Holland, he returned home weary and disappointed, to die of a fever contracted in his wanderings.

As I grew up the recollection of my grandfather's pipe was indelibly stamped on my memory. Had I, however, never seen it, the drawing my father made was so correct that I should have been able to identify it anywhere.

Often and often my mother told me the story of the robbery, fearing lest I should forget it, making me promise that I would keep my eyes open as I passed through the world, in the hope of meeting with my grandfather's pipe.

I was twenty-one years old when I lost my mother, and came into the possession of a sum of money sufficient to enable me to begin life. I connected myself with a worthy man in the grain business. He was quite wealthy, and had taken a fancy to me. I was with him a year when I became in love with his daughter.

I should have mentioned that his name was Peter Krummacher, and his daughter was called Agusta. We loved each other from the first; and I went to him and frankly told our mutual feelings. He listened to me quietly, and when I had finished he said,

"The only objection I made to you is that you have not enough money to wed my daughter. Don't misunderstand me; I admire your character and could give my daughter a dower large enough to maintain you both handsomly, but I do not choose to do so. When you can come to me rich enough to keep her in the style she now lives in, you may take her, if she is willing. That is all I have to say. Good day."

This was a great happiness, for it was unexpected. I went to Augusta and told her all. "Have courage," she replied; "I will wait for you until I am an old woman. What do you propose?"

"I will go to some other place, where money is made faster than in Bavaria, and as soon as I have accumulated enough I will return to you, my darling, if you will remain true to me."

"Have faith, have courage," she answered.

I dissolved business with Peter Krummacher, and went to France. I did not find things as good there as I did in my own land, so I went to England. Worse and worse.

Back I went to France, and fortune favored me. I was one day sitting in a cafe at Bodeaux, when some sailors came and called for wine, sitting down at a small table. They were all Frenchmen, and soon became very noisy in their talk. All at once one of them pulled a pipe out of his pocket, the sight of which all but made me faint. The fellow commenced to smoke my grandfather's pipe. I scarcely knew how to act, I was so afraid of betraying my feelings. Could the diamond still be concealed in that old pipe? Oh! what tumult reigned in my heart that moment!

I called for wine, and filled my glass sent the bottle over to the sailors, they looked over to me and nodded as they drank. Then one of them spoke to the others, and they beckoned to me. I went over to their table.

"Sit down," they said; "you seem like a clever fellow. What is your country?"

I told them I was a citizen of the world, though I was born in Holland.

Then they all laughed and slapped me on the back in good humor.

I ordered more wine of the best quality, and we soon became good friends.

"And so you came from Holland?" remarked he with my grandfather's pipe.

"No, indeed," I replied; "I only said I was born there. I have lived in Bavaria ever since I was a child."

"You wouldn't be any worse for being a Hollander," replied the sailor. I had a messmate Jan Hooft he was called, though I never knew whether that was his true name or not; but a better sailor I never knew; yet he would get drunk. Last voyage he fell overboard at Hague, and was drowned. Poor fellow, this was his old pipe."

"You ought to smoke a better pipe than that," I said; that's nothing but a chunk of wood."

"I saw a beautiful pipe," he replied, "in a shop up the quay. I would like to have such a one, but it costs too much money. Twenty francs! Just think of it," he was speaking to his comrades.

"Bah!" I answered; "twenty francs is a mere bagatell. Let us go and see it."

"Pardon me," he said, "but I could not accept such a gift if you intend to purchase it," he winked at the others.

"That is a sharp fellow," I thought, "but I'll be smart, also."

"Come along," I cried, taking him by the arm.

"Here, garcon, bring us another bottle of your best wine, and you, my friends, drink away until we return."

I paid for that wine, and the sailor took my arm, and we sallied forth.

"You are a noble hearted fellow," he said.

"Bah!" I rejoined, "when one meets good company, it is no merit to be generous."

"Thank you," he replied

We soon came to the shop and I purchased the pipe, and presented it to my friend. He was delighted.

"How can I thank you, he said.

"What a beautiful present! I shall take much pleasure in smoking it, and will always think of you when I do so. Well I shall not trouble Jan's old pipe much now."

"Ah! I know what you shall do. You will give the old pipe to me. It will recall our meeting. It's my fancy, you know."

"You wouldn't smoke an old log lik" that?" he replied, gazing at me with an expression of wonder.

"Truly not," I returned, "but I will hang it up by my bed and think of you my fine fellow, when I look upon it."

He grasped me by the hand with a grip of iron.

"Take it," he said.

The next moment it was in my pocket, add I would have wrestled with a giant before I would have surrendered it.

We found the sailors at the cafe still drinking wine. I ordered something to eat, and we all had a good dinner. Then they shook me by the hand, and went away. They were worthy men and big-hearted.

I seemed to fly over the pavement as I hurried to my lodgings. Locking the door I drew forth his pipe, and commenced to try the knots. None of them moved. The one I was searching for had doubtless grown stiff with age. At length I found it, for it started a little. Then I tried it again, exerting all the power in my fingers. It yielded, and as I unscrewed it, out fell the large, brilliant diamond of my grandfather, Jacob Vanderhayden.

Talk of joy! No man can estimate my delight at that moment. I saw Augusta in her radiant beauty, and Peter Krummacher giving her to me as my wife.

I hurried to Amsterdam; it was the best place in Europe to sell diamonds.

A week later and I had sold the gem for ninety thousand frances. My grandfather had been correct in his estimat of its value.

Back I went to Peter Krummacher, and showed him my money.

"I will keep my word," he said, "You shall return to me in the grain business."

I took the old fellow by the hand, and danced for very joy. Augusta and myself were married, and up to this hour we neither of us have regretted our act. Peter Krummacher died a few years since and left us his great wealth; but had it not been for this old pipe, things might have turned out less happily for the grandson of Jacob Vanderhayden.

Mutilated Currency.

Necessity is the mother of invention in a variety of ways, and frequently develops novel methods of industry. There is no better place in the Union to afford a comprehensive view of this than New York city. Almost every conceivable kind of trivial business is practiced in this city, and tens of thousands of dollars per year flow into the pockets of the peculiar class engaged in these pursuits. The people who adopt these modes for earning a livelihood are, in the main, men of shrewdness, who know a smattering of almost everything available to them in a business way, and who are always keenly alive to their own interests, never allowing themselves to be caught at disadvantage, and never rectifying mistakes.

Just now a very brisk and profitable business is being carried on in a small way, and is based upon the carelessness of mankind. This is the collection of mutilated currency, and national bank notes of every denomination. A large quantity of this material is constantly floating about the money market, and a very large portion of it goes to waste altogether. The business of collecting and selling this description of paper at a discount, now forms the trade of a great number of persons in this city. It is a well-known fact that nearly every person who is in the habit of carrying money loosely about his clothes, comes into possession of more or less of it which is in a rapid state of decay. This, passing from hand to hand, soon becomes mutilated to such an extent as to warrant its refusal by business people. Then it finds its resting-place in the corner of some unused compartment of a pocket-book or money-drawer, and in many cases remains there until finally thrown into the waste-basket and burned with other worthless rubbish. Thus a very great amount of money is annually lost. The adoption of the idea of collecting it and selling it again to Government agents, however, has opened a new field of trade and while it will serve as the means of affording a living, such as it is, to those engaged in it, it will also be the source of much saving to the general business community.

The collectors or "speculators" as they term themselves, only require a huge wallet, into which the mutilated stamps and bills are stuffed promiscuously, without any attention of care as to whether they are further mutilated or not. The capital stock necessary to a successful prosecution of this business is not necessarily great. A few dollars in the hands of a shrewd speculator will return a very gratifying revenue, as the prices for mutilated currency vary in the most irregular manner, according to the various stages of decomposition. One of the operators, who does a large business in this city and its immediate vicinity, estimate his profits from the business at a figure which would afford a satisfactory living for a person of moderate tastes. This dealer has established a route, which he visits with punctual regularity, and the business people with whom he deals lay aside all the mutilated paper money coming into their possession until the "stamp-broker" calls for them. Many of the business men find it a matter of some profit to pay attention to the collection of mutilated currency. The generality of people are not aware of the fact that when stamps and bills have become torn and disfigured, and a portion, perhaps, missing, that they can be redeemed at a slight discount, and, therefore, in view of their ignorance, lose considerable money, in the way of selling them at almost any price. Persons who do business with the broker, being aware of this, buy up what they are able to seize upon, and retail to the brokers at a profit.

The prices for currency and bills varies. An average of from sixty to seventy per cent. is paid. In the case of stamps and bills being so mutilated to an extent which renders their denomination unrecognizable, the price is very low, yet they are as marketable as the others. A day or two since the broker mentioned made some large purchases in the upper part of the city, investing about twenty dollars. The character of the currency he purchased, and the tightness of the bargains he made, would bring him a profit of upward of five dollars, which show, that the business, when when judiciously handled, is of considerable moment.

The mutilated currency thus collected is sold at the mutilated bills averages about 10 per cent. Here it is kept in quantities, and then forwarded to Washington, where, at the Treasury building, it is destroyed. The speculator, in a majority of cases, buys dilapidated currency at about eighty cents, and sometimes for seventy-five; this he disposes of at the Sub Treasury for ninety, and as this is about the average of the business, its lucrative results may be easily computed on the extent of ground covered by the speculator. The business is increasing in this and neighboring cities, women in many instances, having adopted it, meeting with much success.

Novel Runaway Matches.

From the Lexington (Ky.) Reporter.)

A singular incident happened on the L. C. and L. train, conducted by Captain Clobessy, the other day. An old gentleman and his hopeful son of about nineteen summers got on the cars at Cropper's station, in company with two blooming lasses. Their appearance and actions excited some suspicion, and upon inquiry it was ascertained that the two gentleman were runaway lovers and the two ladies cousins, who were going to become of one flesh with the father and son respectively. The father, discreet man that he was, had chosen the elder of the two maidens, who was about twenty, and the son had taken the younger, a blooming miss of eighteen.

They accomplished their journey in safety, were married in Jeffersonville, and returned by Capt. Clobessy's train again. It was quite amusing to see them as they chuckled over their success in outwitting the stern parents of the girls—leaning across the aisle to whisper to each other, and resuming their erect attitude to give an affectionate squeeze to the fair ones by their sides. We never before heard of father and son running off on the same train to get married, but presume it is well to have that kind of confidence existing in the same family.

THE following is a literal copy of a sentence which was passed upon a prisoner in Westmoreland county in 1786:

The Lecturer and the Reporter.

A reporter having dined with some friends, attended a lecture afterwards, and favored the public with the following report: "The lecture last evening was a brilliant affair. The hall ought to have been filled, but we are sorry to say only 40 persons were present. The speaker commenced by saying, that he was by birth an ecclesiastical deduction; gave a learned description of Satan, and his skill in sawing trees. Among other things, he stated that the Patriarch Abraham taught Cecrops arithmetic. We trust the eloquent divine may be induced to repeat the lecture at some future day.' What the lecturer said to the reporter: "Dear Sir—In a report of my lecture in your beautiful city, you have made some mistakes, which I wish to correct. You made me speak of myself as by birth an 'ecclesiastical deduction.' What I said was, that I was not by birth, but only ecclesiastically, a Dutchman. Instead of speaking of Satan as sawing trees, I spoke of him as sowing tares. I said nothing of Abraham, but spoke of the Arabians as nomads of patriarchal simplicity. I said that Cecrops was the founder of Athens, and instructed the people in agriculture."

SUNDAY READINGS.—No. 8.

For when he dieth, he shall carry nothing away.
PSALMS.

At the summons of God's angle, Death, man lays down wealth, and power, goes out from the pleasant company of friends, the home of comfort and luxury, and all that is mortal sleep under the green sod. Nothing more to him avails the gold heaped with so much toil; a rival may occupy his seat of honor; the firelight may gleam brightly on the family hearth, friends may gather round the social board, the world move on in its accustomed ways, but the busy brain and hand, the eager eye and ear, take no cognizance of its pleasures or pains, its joy or sadness.

The Psalmitist says, when a man dieth he shall carry nothing away. This is said however only in reference to the perishable good of earthly possessions, to riches and "the glory of his house;" such possessions as could be of no avail in the world whose portals are opened at the summons of death.

Life, busy, teeming life is around us, the heart is throbbing with brilliant anticipations, the brain is burdened with its hurrying thoughts the hands scarce know rest and the field is widening with each successive step. A small voice whispers, a soft finger is laid upon the lip, the burden once so proudly borne is too heavy for brain and heart, and life's labor is ended, weary hands are at rest.

He shall carry nothing away! Aye, not one broad gold piece of all his hidden hoard, not one acre of all his broad lands; but is there nothing else for him to bear into the unseen world? Yes, all, that was truly his, himself, the character he has builded through all his toilsome years.

Perhaps he has builded "better than he knew" while striving for the perishable things of earth, and has grown strong in integrity, in confiding trust in God, in patient endeavor after perfection. If so, he has carried the better part of his gains with him, his own forever.

There are things that cannot die. The poor man's blessing, the orphan's prayer, the tempted strengthened and saved, the example that led heavenward—these fruits of holy living are of things imperishable.

At the bidding of the death angle we drop every burden, resign each care, and the world knows no more nor even misses us from its great company. We drop the garment we have worn and go forth into the unknown. All that was perishable, even to our bodies, we leave—but over our souls, the minds that hope and fear, that remember and anticipate, over the hearts that love with undying faithfulness, Death holds no sceptre of command.

It is then only what we are that is of moment when the summons to depart comes to us. Hope, faith, integrity, these go with us whersoever we go, and he that is rich in these has no thought for that which is left behind.

The business of life is not to heap treasures of wealth in all its various forms, or at best this is but part of life's great purpose. The better portion is self-culture, growth the consecration of every faculty to God's will as manifested through Christ. He alone who grows daily better and wiser is living the true life intended, and death cannot rob him of what he has garnered.

He shall carry nothing away! How many would be relieved of an infinite dread and sorrow if they could but drop all at the portal of the grave,—all the harvest of a mis-spent life—dishonest gain, crusty selfishness, unkindness; but alas! these that have been nourished in the heart cannot at

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL,

NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE

Throat & Lungs.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families of Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefitted and cured at his office. While he publishes less, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation—

First. Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation.

Second. It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw of the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood.

Third. It is free from squills, lobelia, ipicac and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which allay cough only, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys, and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or not—is responsible for the pay.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima-facie evidence of fraud.

A FRIEND handed us, the other day, the following production, which was prepared by an ambitious young Democratic attorney of this place, and intended for a political speech to be used in the campaign of last fall. Believing it to be a fair sample of the Democratic thunder used in the last canvass, and as an encouragement to the legal gentleman himself, we print it verbatim et literatim, from the original manuscript:

"STAND BY THE SHIP.

Stand by the Ancient Ship the Pilot he is there ready and willing to give up the Old Ship. Only such who possess No intelligence or non-compos-mentis. What does the word Democrat Mean. it has reference to nothing else but the word Democrat itself. Democrat is One who adheres to a government by the people or favors the extension and the right of Suffrage to all classes of Men Self-made who possess Zeal Earnestness energy and enthusiasm will Stand firm by the Ship, The Democratic National Convention of the Ninth of July has taught us A lesson which we will never forget. It has taught policy men and Sophistry men a salutary lesson and It has taught us a lesson to Stand firm by the Old Ship in the time of storm tempest and danger when the black clouds around us houl and furl. We must have Self-made men to anchor our Ship who are clothed with power descretion requisite to meet the unforseen distressing Vissisituds of the voyage and Such men ot to possess novel intellectual qualifications of the first order. A pilot of a Ship should have the talent to command in the midst of danger courage presence of mind to meet surmount extraordinary perils. But where are we to-day? Out on the Ocean sailing—lost in a fog. But by and by we will reorganize the crew of the Old Ship and Isend her sailing.—We must not become discouraged and leave our minds in a dormant State on political Matters. We are unconscious of the powers existing within us until awaken by our intellectual powers.—We must put our minds down to systematic thinking and tak for its bases Scientific principles that cannot be reach by our opponents. The democratic ship it contained the embodiment of perfection. all government eluminated from the conflict of ages for four hundred years the Democratic Ship sailed for the good and welfare of our Country that has past and gone and we bleeved this to be true until our unfortunate division defeated us. if it was truth then it is truth now.—Democracy and constitutions are convertable terms the one cannot subsist without the other. We are a band of Democratic brothers marching up the hill of political Science and when we reach the summit we will shout one and all and give three cheers to our brave and energetic ancesters who are Sleeping beneath the sod and this should be in remembrance of our brave and noble ancestors who laid the foundations of our government on a permanent rock. Our republican form of gov-

The reason of this is because we have ignorant rulers and as long as this is the case We cannot expect with a full expectation that our Country will prosper with such rulers, but we can expect with a full expectation that it will go to destruction and ruination.—transubstiation must take place and the will of the free thinking men will demand it. A republican is the form of gov-ernments which all highly civilized ones adopt but such kinds of government have always failed and will always fail where the masses of the people are ignorant. It requires great wisdom in the men who makes the laws for a great nation and adapt them to the varied circumstances of the people great wisdom should be in the men who expound these laws and adjust the rights and redress the wrongs of individuals and communities under them—great wisdom in the men who support the authority of the government by a faithful execution of the laws thus framed by legislatures and expounded by Judges.

—There are in Lehigh iron region, says the Allentown "Chronicle," fifteen blast furnace corporations, which, with forty-one completed furnaces, manufacture one-third of the whole iron product of the country. Five new but yet non-producing furnace companies have been organized, and altogether there are nine new blast furnaces throughout the valley contemplated and in course of construction.

—An insane women, carrying in her arms a rag baby, was arrested officer A. Boat at the depot yesterday and conveyed to the Mayor's office. She had escaped from the Cumberland county almshouse. While at the Mayor's office she was taken with a fit. She was taken back to Cumberland county to-day by the authorities of that county.—Ex.

[For the REPUBLICAN.]

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—What has become of our Branch Railroad to Lemont? If it is to be built, we ought to be hearing something about it, and if it is not to be built we ought to be very energetic in forming some other connection much more important for Bellefonte, which is by no means so remote or improbable as many might suppose. It would be infinitely better for Bellefonte to build a road down Nittany Valley, through Fishing Creek Gap, and down Sugar Valley and White Deer Valley to a point at which they could connect with the Catawissa Railroad. The route is feasible, a large amount of stock could be procured along the line of the road, and a connection with the Catawissa road would reduce our freight at least one third. This would allow manufacturers to live, and offer inducements for the concentration of capital in manufacturing enterprises in our own town. As it is now, our manufacturers languish and die, and the capital invested in them is being withdrawn to seek investment in other and more profitable ventures. The question of freights is the one which determines against every venture which has been proposed here for years, and which dwarfs and cripples all our existing industries. It is a fact which can be and has been demonstrated, that goods can be transported in wagons to Lewistown and there shipped by rail more cheaply than if shipped by rail from here. This experiment was actully tried this last winter at a saving of 50 per cent. in the cost of transportation.

I started out, Mr. Editor, to say a word about the L. C. & S. C. R. R., and have wandered sadly from my original object. Let me say a word or two nothwithstanding. From the forks of Penn's Creek to Linden Hall, a distance of twenty miles, this road is graded and ready for the ties. If the grading of the road were continued to Bellefonte at once, and the track laid, can there be any doubt but what the road would pay more than its running expenses. Whatever would be over and above its running expenses would be so much interest on the capital at present looked up in this twenty miles of unfinished road. This seems to me a plain business view of the situation; but I may be wrong in my premises, and, if so, of course my conclusion would not be sound. It looks, however, as if the heavy work through the narrows would not be finished this year, and if not there will be not only a great financial blunder, but actual injustice to the people along the line of the road, who have subscribed and paid for their stock with the distinct understanding and implied promise that they should have a railroad outlet in the shortest time possible.—If the road from Bellefonte to Linden Hall were put under contract at once we could have the cars running in time to transport the crops of this year, which give very fair promise, to market. Let our people move in this thing. Let petitions be sent to the board of directors by the stockholders all along the line. Let the citizens of Bellefonte appoint an efficient committee to wait upon the board and urge the immediate construction of the branch road, and if all these things fail let us strike out for ourselves and seek another connection which will do us infinitely more good.

STOCKHOLDER.

—Wetsler & Twitmire ask attention to a new style First Class Cooking Stove. The manufacturers, in bringing out this stove, have exercised special care to produce an article that would meet the requirements of the people in all respects, and the flattering testimonials which have been received from parties who have tested its merits, furnish the most unqualified assurance of its complete success. It is provided with Improved Double Acting Flues which give to it a quick and powerful draft, while it is so closely fitted that the fire may be controlled with perfect ease. Great care is bestowed in the making and mounting of this stove.

It is put together by experienced mechanics in the best manner possible. Its symmetrical proportions and artistic adornments make it one of the neatest and most beautiful stoves to look at, and for convenience in its cooking arrangments it is unexcelled.

It has a neat and convenient ash shifter. Warranted a superior baker, and destined, we have no doubt, to become a universal favorite in the kitchin.

The firm of Wetsler and Twitmire have also just received a large stock of Head Light oil. It is superior to any other oil for lamps. You will certainly save money by giving them a call.

—"My new bonnet" now agitates the female mind. We saw the first one last Sabbath. It was a "love," and only cost the modest sum of eight dollars, which is very moderate for a "three decker."

—The BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN and all material thereto belonging has been removed to the rooms in the Bush House, formerly occupied by the Bellefonte Press Co.

—Our neighbor over the way, is the Democratic Watchman.

A STATE GOVERNOR REBUKING THE CHURCHES.—Governor Washburne, of Wisconsin, speaks right out. He has put in his annual message a well merited rebuke of "raffles, grab-bags, and prize-packages at church fairs." He says very plainly that these are beginnings of gambling, and foster the spirit of gambling among the younger people of the State. He has issued a lay sermon on the subject, a passage of which is given below.

"The laws of the State as applicable to professional gamblers are doubtless all-sufficient, and only require to be enforced. But some law seems to be required to break up the schools where gamblers are made. These are everywhere. Even the church (unwittingly, no doubt) is sometimes found to be doing the work of the devil. Gift concerts, gift enterprise and raffles, sometimes in aid of religious or charitable objects, but often for less worthy objects, lotteries, prize packages, &c., are all devices to obtain money without value received. Nothing is so demoralizing or intoxicating, particularly to the young, as the acquistion of money or property without labor. If you can devise some law to break up these practices and bring them into discredit, you will deserve the thanks of all the good people."

MAGAZINES

THE AMERICAN FARMERS' ADVOCATE comes to hand for March, a little behind time, but the delay is accounted for by its improved appearance. The publishers, who have from the commencement shown unsual enterprise in giving a greater amount of reading matter, and of a quality unexcelled, have made one improvement after another. With this No. they commence printing upon fine paper, from clear, new type furnishing as hertofore sixteen large pages of, reading matter, stiched and cut. Every farmer and every business man should take it, and the publishers have adopted a plan which enables everybody to obtain it without cost. By sending them a subscription for any $2 or higher priced paper or magazine they furnish the ADVOCATE as a premium, without extra charge. The subscriptino prices is singly $1, or in clubs at 50 cents each.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. Where the parts are not gone, its effects are marvelous. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Price, 50c. a bottle, large bottles $1.00. J. B. ROSE & Co.,
58 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither mineral, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

PROSPECTUS OF THE REPUBLIC.

Believing that the inestimable privileges of self government guaranteed by the Federal Constitution involve corresponding duties, and that among these are sleepless vigilance and the devotion of the best thoughts and efforts of the citizen in aid of the preservation and development of our country and its institutions, we have determined, in furtherance of these objects, to establish a monthly magazine devoted to the discussion of the science of government and to a review of political events.

Assuming that the legitimate object of good government is provision for the welfare and happiness of the citizen, his physical comfort, educational growth, and moral development, THE REPUBLIC will bring to this test all economic questions, political action, and governmental measures.

Holding firmly that in a republic, constituted as ours is, political parties are essential, and that they furnish the best, not to say the only means of that constant and severe scrutiny to which power should be always subjected, THE REPUBLIC will insist that the country is not only safe, but safest with its destiny in the keeping of the Republican party; that measures of reform and progress must be carried forward through its instrumentality, and that its permanent ascendancy should be maintained so long as it responds to the demands of enlightened and progressive public opinion.

THE REPUBLIC will avoid unwarranted censure of opponents as well as indiscriminate praise of friends—aiming at that degree of independence and candor which concede justice to both. It will not waste words, influence, or power by purely negative criticisms, but will endeavor to promote correct action by affirmatively and plainly showing the better way. True, this line of criticism involves thought, care, investigation—with the exercise of an impartial judgment; but history has conclusively demonstrated that by these means the cause of truth and good government can be best advanced.

THE REPUBLIC will furnish a brief and accurate record of events of political and general interest, as—

The proceedings of Congress.
The decisions and action of the Executive Departments.
The action of States and of political bodies of national import.
The progress of material and educational development.
Decisions of the judiciary of political or financial importance and of general application.

The publication being monthly, the record will be made up after the events have transpired, and will make, at the close of the year, a volume of accurate and valuable information in convenient form for preservation and reference.

Among the topics claiming discussion will be—

The relative power and jurisdiction of the Federal and State Governments; the expansion of territory, revenue, finance, education, industrial schools, postal telegraph, postal savings banks, railway and canal transportation, life and fire insurance, river and harbor improvements, the public health, reforms in the public service, and the establishment of equal civil and political rights. On these and kindred subjects THE REPUBLIC will aim to convey reliable information, excite thought, and induce action.

The writers for THE REPUBLIC have been selected from among those whose sagacity, judgment, and energy were thoroughly tested in the recent political contest; and their names are withheld now, as then, for the sole reason that they prefer success through reason, argument, and the merit of their productions.

Moved by these considerations, and subordinating the question of remuneration entirely, we appeal with confidence to those who, during the recent campaign, responded so liberally in money, time, and effort, to aid in the introduction of THE REPUBLIC The Magazine will be furnished at as near cost price as practicable, and will be enlarged whenever the patronage received will justify increased expenditure.

THE REPUBLIC will be published monthly, on superior paper, in clear type, and will contain not less than forty-eight pages of reading matter, exclusive of advertisements.

GREAT BRITAIN.

AN INSANE AMERICAN AT WINDSOR CASTLE.

LONDON, March 28

An insane American appeared at the lodge gate of Windsor Castle yesterday, and demanded admittance to see the Queen, alleging that her Majesty was his mother. He was arrested by the guards, and upon being threatened with incarceration in the mad house, promised to return to the United States.

FURTHER EXAMINATION OF THE ALLEGED BANK OF ENGLAND FORGER.

Edwin Noyes, the American, who is charged with being implicated in the frauds on the Bank of England, was again brought before the lord mayor, at the justice room in the Mansion House, to-day, for examination. Among the witnesses examined was the manager of the Continental Bank, who, upon being shown a photograph of Bidwell, identified him as the party who opened an account with that institution under the name of Horton.

The manager also gave the details of several extensive transactions had with the bank by Bidwell, and expressed his belief that Noyes was merely clerk for the really guilty parties. The examination was further adjourned.

SPAIN.

LONDON, March 28.

There has been severe fighting in Spain, in which the Carlists claim an important victory. The government troops retreated to Granalleir much demoralized, where they were captured by Sebalio. The small garrison also surrendered. There has been a demonstration at Tarragona, in commemoration of the establishment of the Paris Commune. A street fight has occurred in Barcelona, in which six persons were killed.

PEACE RESTORED IN THE CABINET.

MADRID, March 28.

The threatened crisis in the Spanish Ministry has been averted, and the difficulties in the Cabinent averted. All differences existing among the members have been satisfactorily arranged, and harmony restored. It is stated that no changes in the Ministry are now anticipated, in view of the amicable adjustment of the impending difficulties.

FRANCE.

PARIS, March 28.

The petition of Prince Jerome Napoleon praying for French citizenship is to be presented to the National Assembly to-morrow.

Upon its introduction the government will instantly propose to pass to the order of the day, and in the event of an adverse vote will immediately introduce a bill banishing the Bonapartes from France.

PROSPECTUS
POPULAR JOURNAL OF
Physical And Mental Hygiene
Edited By Thos. H. Hesby, M. D., and Thos. F. Mays, M. D.

This Journal is intended to popularize that department of Medical Science which relates to the preservation of Health and the prevention of Disease. The urgent need of such a periodical is felt by all classes; by none more than the Medical Profession itself.

Its pages will be devoted to upholding the claims of legitimate and rational medicine, by warning the public against the evils and dangers of the misapplication of medicinal agents, and the bold pretensions of empirics, charlatans and quacks.

It will be the constant effort of the editors to teach the community that the proper sphere of domestic and nursery effort should be, to use all the resources of Hygiene and Sanitary Science to prevent disease, but when a case of real sickness occurs, no time should be lost in seeking professional advice.

It will be the special endeavor of this Journal to point out the ethical relations between Physician and Patient, that the public may be educated to a higher appreciation of professional services, and to juster views of the powers and true mission of medical science.

It will contain original and selected articles upon the regulations of all the physical agents necessary to health, such as the influence of Air, and its relations to respiration, including ventilation; Food, its adaptation to the varying conditions of age, habits of life, and climate, with its adulteration; Exercise, as affecting the muscles, sense and brain; Physical Education, as bearing upon the health of children; Personal and General Cleanliness, and the Use of Baths; Clothing, its physiological uses, and as a cause of disease under the absurd dictates of fashion. Special attention will also be given to Medical Police, as the modifying influence of climate and sanitary legislation; Drainage, Water Supply, and the Location and Surroundings of Buildings; the Influence of various Trades and Professions upon Physical and Mental Health; the Relation of Mind and Body, and the Influence of Education upon Health.

All these varied topics will be discussed in a plain and practical manner, divested of all professional technicalities, and with the aid of all data afforded the most recent researches in sanitary science.

It is believed that such a Journal will be found a valuable auxiliary to the intelligent and conscientious physician in his efforts to overcome that gross ignorance in relation to matters pertaining to medicine, which is too often the greatest barrier to his success; therefore we invoke the aid of the profession in bringing this periodical before the public, for whose benefit it is mainly intended.

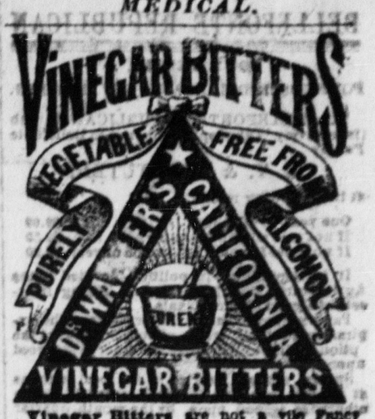
MEDICAL.

VINEGAR BITTERS



Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c. that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain longun well, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Typesetters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassful. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

GRACE'S KITTY.

BY ELISABETH AKERS ALLEN.

Gracie's kitty, day by day,
Moped beside the fire and pined;
Would no longer frisk or play,
Or the worsted ball unwind.
Gracie coaxed. "play, kitty, do!"
Kitty answered sadly, "Mew!"

All in vain were dainty fare,
Bread and milk all warm and new,
Downy nest and tender care;
Thinner, weaker still she grew,
Could no longer run or purr,
Lay in bed and would not stir.

Gracie trailed her long white gown
Down the stairs at early light,
Wondering "if kitty 'th grown
Any better ever night;"
Found poor kitty cold and dead
In her pretty basket bed.

Gracie made another bed
Where the morning-glories climb;
With red rose-leaves lined and spread,
And perfumed with pinks and thyme.
Rarely has a human head
Found so soft and sweet a bed.

Gracie's little tender hands
End at last their loving task;
Sobbing by the grave she stands,
Then she lifts her face to ask,
While the slow tears downward roll,
"Mamma, where ith kitty 'th thoul?"

Boy Heroes.

At the begining of the French Revolution their lived in the interior of France a boy named Joseph Bana. He was a youth of warm and generous feelings who loved his mother and his country. He was an ardent Republican, and wishing to serve his country in the struggle for liberty, he entered the army at the age of twelve as a drummer boy. His whole soul entered into the cause; his one desire was that his country might be free. He was willing to make any sacrifice, to endure any hardship. He denied himself every luxury, and sent the whole of his pay as a musician, to his mother.

During the march of his regiment to La Vendee, he found himself cut off from the troops, and surrounded by a party of Royalists. He was placed in the centre of a square of soldiers, and twenty glittering bayonets were pointed towards his breast.

"Shout" said the leader, "shout—"Long live Louis XVI! or die!" The boy's resolutions were made. He would not purchase life at the price of dishoner. He raised his hat, gazed wistfully upon the blue sky and green, gave a last tear of affection to his poor mother, and waving his hand aloft, exclaimed,

"Viva la Republique!"

The twenty bayonets did their work, and the boy, true to his country and his convictions of duty found a hero's grave. But his example lived, and his name was sung by the patriot army of France as the watch word of devotion to liberty.

"O Barra, we envy your glory
Still victor, though breathless you lie."

True to his mother, true to his country, true to his sense of duty—where in the broad annals of heroism do we find anything more noble than this!

It was at the battle of Montmirail that Napoleon found it necessary to dispatch an order to one of the officers of the division, and he hastily called to a young officer, who had entered the service from one of the boy regiments of France. "Take this order, sir, spare neither yourself or horse. There is not a moment to lose."

Smoke rolled in black clouds over the field, and shot and shell rained through the air.

The young officer soon returned.

"Nobly, nobly, monsieur," said Napoleon. "Although you are a youngster I give you a captain's brevet. What is your name?"

"Durosier, Sire."

"It seems familiar. Where have I heard of it before?"

"I was colonel of the boy battalion, your majesty."

"That is another reason why I should raise you in rank."

"It is too late sire," replied the youth a shade coming over his face. "Too late? Why?"

"Because they hit me." As he said this he drew his handkerchief from his breast dripping with blood.

He was dying.

"It will soon be over," he said "Vive l' Emperor, Vive la France!"

He realed in his saddle, and fell into the arms of a soldier.

"So young, so young!" said the Emperor with feeling—"So brave; poor boy, poor boy!"

The moon and stars came out on the ghastly field of Montmirail, and shone on the dead form of no braver hero than Timolean Durosire.

The battle of Fontenny! How does the field carry the mind of the reader of historo back to the old days of the Georges! Southley in his Life of Wesley has given a sketch of the triumphant death of some of the Christian soldiers who perished on the field. One poor fellow named Clemens, having his arm shattered with a bullet, refused to be taken out of the engagement. Presently a bullet broke the other arm. He sank down to die.

"How is it with your soul now, brother Clemens?" asked a comrade.

"I am as happy as I can be out of Paradise." answered the Christian hero, and soon after these words the full happiness of Paradise was revealed to him.

A lad named Nesbit, the son of an officer, was wounded while acing as ensign, and fell into the hands of the French. His wounds were regarded as fatal, and no effort was made to give him medical help.

"I might live if my wounds were dressed," he said imploringly.

Seeing his distress a Frenchman resolved to put an end to his life by applying the bayonet and he inflicted another dreadful wound. While thus lying alone, his life blood ebbing away he was found by his father.

"My son?"

"Dispatch me."

"Dispatch thee, my son. The Count has ordered us to bring thee to the camp."

He was taken to the camp, his wounds were dressed, and he lived six hours in terrible agony. His father watched by his side.

"My son," said the officer, "collect but strength to tell me the name of the soldier that bayoneted you, and I swear by the honor of a soldier that he shall be broken upon the wheel."

"My dear father, I know him not, and if I did I would never tell."

In one of the early battles of the south during the American revolution, Capt Messer, an American officer, was made a prisoner by the enemy and was sentenced to be hanged. As the Captain was led out to execution, his wife fell weeping to the ground, and his little boy with eyes filled with tears, came running to the commanding officer Gen. Tryon, and said:

"Sir, hang me and let my father live."

"Who told you to say that?" asked the officer.

"No one."

"But why do you ask it?"

"Because if you hang my father, my mother will die and the children will perish." The heart of the officer was melted. He said,:

"Your father shall not be hanged to-day."

He could not hang the father of such a boy.

Shortly before the battle of Wilson's creek, one of the first of the war for the Union, there came to Geo. Lyon's headquarters, in Missouri, a woman who had been driven out of Tennessee by the rebels, and who brought with her only son, a lad about twelve years of age. The boy's name was Edward Lee. He wished to become a drummer boy in the Union army and as he was very skilful in the use of the drum, he at once procured a situation. It made his mother's heart ache to leave him.

"Captain," she said, "if he is not killed"—here the feelings of a mother choked her utterance—"if he is not killed, Captain, you will bring him back won't you?"

"Yes," said the Captain, "we will bring him back. We shall be discharged in six weeks."

"After the battle of Wilson's Creek." said an officer, "I was detailed on guard duty, my post being on a high eminence overlooking the ravine where we had just engaged the enemy, and where many of the wounded were yet lying. The moon had gone down in the early part of the night. All was silent save the far-off howling of the wolf that seemed to scent the banquet we had been preparing for him. Presently I heard a drum beating the morning call in the ravine below. The sound was familiar to me. I knew it was—

"Our drummer boy from Tennessee"

"As soon as I could go to the spot, I followed the sound of the drum, and found Eddie seated upon the trunk of a fallen tree, while his drum was hanging upon a bush in front of him.

As soon as he saw me he dropped his drum sticks and said—

"O, Corporal, I am so glad to see you. Bring me something to drink."

"I turned to bring him some water from the brook. He did not understand my intention, and said with a hurt look.

"Don't leave me, Corporal. I can't walk."

"I soon returned with the water when I discovered that both of his feet had been shot away by a cannon ball,

"He drank eagerly, and then said with a wishful look:

"You don't think I will die, do you?"

"At this moment I heard the tramp of cavalry coming down the ravine, and, before I could escape, a scout of the enemy was upon me, and I was taken prisoner. I requested the officer to take Eddie to the front, and he did so carrying him with great tenderness and care. When we reached the camp of the enemy, the little fellow was dead.

Agricultural.

From Spirit of The Times.
Cassius.

There is a difference of opinion in this locality as to the right way to feed colts from the time of weaning until they get their growth, and at the request of different persons interested in raising horses I will make a statement of a few different ways of feeding in practice by some of our people in this vicinity, and wish your opinion as to which is the better mode of those hereinafter mentioned, and also in what way you would recommend any one to feed a colt in order to produce the best horse at five years old. It is a subject very little mentioned in any books I have read, and I consider it a very important one, and have no doubt that from your experience in such matters, and your intimate acquaintance with breeders of fine horses, you can point out the right way to feed the youngsters. Now for the examples: Many, in fact nearly all of our farmers, raise colts in this way: Mares foal generally in May or June; colt runs with mare four or five months in pasture. Mare, if young, works all the season at farm work; if old, does the running about to a buggy. But in this case neither mare nor colt gets any grain, but run in pasture; and if the season is a dry one are not not in good condition when fall comes. When pasture fails, the colt has the run of the straw yard and some hay to eat, but in the majority of cases the colts come out in the spring as poor a crow, with hair from four to six inches long; and so the colt goes on to four years old, and the farmer says to purchasers with much pride, "That colt never had a mouthful of grain, and never had a halter on." Now I will mention three cases where colts were fed, as each owner declares, the best way to grow and develop them into horses. No. 1 foaled May 24, 1871; dam not used while suckling the colt. Mare run in small pasture, and in summer, feed being short, was feed once a day bran and oats scalded together, two quarts each. Colt ate some with mare, and was weaned when four months old, and was fair size and in fine growing condition. During fall and winter was fed three quarts of oats and three quarts of bran daily, and what hay he would eat; had a lot of a quarter of an acre to run in, and the door of his paddock was never closed except at night. When one year old turned out to pasture, and for two months had nothing but grass; then was fed three to four quarts of oats daily. Taken from pasture last of October and put in same paddock he was in first winter, and has been feed four quarts oats and four quarts bran daily, and what hay he would eat up clean during this past winter. On the 27th ult., at 51 months and 3 days old, stood 14¾ hands and weighed 910 lbs; has been driven double three times, and looks like an ordinary three-year-old. No. 5. Same treatment as No. 1. with the following exceptions: When not in pasture had a box 11x20 to run in instead of a quarter acre lot; fed ten quarts of oats daily, and apples and carrots, some malt, and nubbins of corn, (oats sometimes ground) Sire same as No. 1; dam much larger. When 10 months old stood 14½, and weighed 940 lbs., has been driven twice double; is over on his knees a little. Do you think this is caused by too much grain, to little exercise, or straw in box preventing a firm foothold? Box has a ground floor. No. 3. First summer ran with dam, who was not worked. Weaned in November, fed during fall and winter on cut hay and bran; no oats; was in fine condition in spring and when sent to pasthre with 1 and 2 was the largest of the lot, and was fed as the others were while in pasture. During the past winter has been fed on cut hay and bran, wet and mixed together. He stands about 14¼ hands, weighs 750 lbs. His sire was larger, and his dam nearly as large as those of No. 2, and he is the oldest of the three. He has neither the bone or vim of the other two. Now of these four ways of bringing up colts, which do you think nearest right? In what particulars would you do differently, and for the next two years how would you feed them in order to have as good a horse as can be produced, so far as care and feed conduce to make all that can be made of the animal? By publishing this and giving your opinion, you will oblige many of yonr patrons. Answer.—1. The farmers who follow this method of half starvalion are very unwise. That is all that need be said in regard to it. 2. The plan recited in No. 1 is good: and we could not suggest anything better. It appears to us to be the golden mean between the starving plan and the over feeding and stuffing method. The chance to run in the paddock in the daytime was an excellent thing. No. 2 was much too highly fed, and the confinement in the loose box without a paddock was not wise. Ten quarts of oats daily, with apples, carrots, malt, and corn, was enough to surfeit the colt, to make him fat, and to injure his digestive organs, especially as he had no exercise. That feed is strong enough for a powerful, mature horse that is worked six days a week. No. 3 was not wel treated when taken up from the pasture in the fall. Cut hay and bran wet is wretched food for a growing colt, and we do not see how he could be expected to equal the others in bone and vim.

What we Know About a Hot Bed.

This is a difficult question for many persons, for the reason they will not take time to inform themselves, although it is almost indispensable to those who "make garden" if they would have vegetables grow in season. An investment of about three dollars will furnish the necessary sash, glass and lumber to build a hot bed large enough for any ordinary kitchen garden. Select a site with a south eastern exposure, as near level as possible. Dig a pit three by five feet, two feet six inches deep, board up inside, the back part one foot above ground the front part three inches above ground, giving the sash a slope of nine inches in five feet. If a larger bed is required, get two sashes three by five feet, or any number desired, and dig the pit accordingly. Have rests across the bed for the sash to rest on with a strip one inch thick between them, so that one sash can be moved without desturbing the other. This done straw mats or shutters made of half inch boards, should be provided, to lay over the sash in very cold weather.

In this climate hot beds are made from the first week of March to the second week in April owing to the weather. The manure should be horse manure, that has not been exposed to the weather. Mix with leaves and pile in a conical heep till it heats. Spread out for one day then pile up till it heats a second time after which place it in the hot bed, two feet deep and put on the glass. At the end of three das put in some fine earth or leaf mould well mixed with finely rotted manure, or a small quantity of bone dust or guano, to the depth of eight inches. Be sure that the manure shall have been well tramped in and the earth level or the frequent watering will wash the seed from the rows. In three days more or when the mercury would indicate 90 degrees under the sash, the bed will be ready to plant. Mark your rows from front to back about one inch apart and sow your seed.

It is a good idea to drop some radish seed in the rows, for they generate so much earlier than other seeds, that the rows can be seen and the weeds kept down without disturbing the other seed. The reason for so many failures in attempting to raise plants in hot beds, is that the manure is frequently taken from the stable, placed in the bed, the earth put on and, seed sown the same day. If this hits all right but nine cases out of ten the temperature will rise so high that it will rot or destroy the seed. If the bed shall be made in cold weather the covering should remain on till nine or ten o'clock in the morning, and should he remove about half an hour before the sash is raised to give air to the plants. Giving air to the plants is one of the secrets of success, and care must be taken not to allow the temperature to rise too high in the bed before the sash shall be raised or when the weather is cold not to raise it too soon, hence close observation and attention are absolutely necessary. The bed should be closed at the proper time in the afternoon or evening according to the weather. It is a good idea to have a thermometer in the bed which will always show the degree of temperature. A barrel should be at hand, in which to keep tepid water. The bed should be watered every evening, after planting by means of a rose nozzled watering pot with tepid water. If the bed should grow too thick before the garden shall be ready, it facilitates their growth very much to replant in a cold frame, which is made similar to a hot bed, only manure is used which will not heat, giving each plant ample room to grow. When ready to prick out, all the dirt about the roots should be preserved and set with the plant.

the eleventh hour be blotted out save by a miracle.

So a man must carry into the presence of infinite purity his sin-stained soul, if such it be, leaving behind the treasures for which he has burdened his soul with the sense of great unfaithfulness.

While then we live and labor and love and enjoy the material blessings God vouchsafes but recalls when death summons, let us see that the nobler good is ours, the pure heart, trusting faith, unmurmuring submission, which are the fruits of the holy spirit and which survive the chilling blasts of the tomb. What then are we to carry over the dark sea and into the green field beyond? This question is being answered daily in the characters that are evolved from the duties, pleasures, joys and sorrows that make up our earthly experience.

If, when earth recedes and our interest in all that has been fades with failing breath, we bear within a pure heart, the terrors of the unknown vanish and the "well done good and faithful servant" is heard by ears deaf to all human voices, to all outward sounds.

We do then carry away with us all that is good and all that is evil garnered into history of a life.

Bellefonte and County.

——The public vendue as an institution is no longer frequent or popular.

——There are still some cases of spotted fever in Aaronsburg and vicinity.

——Prime Domestic Key West and Havana cigars at Green's.

——Parlor stoves will soon be on the way to the garret.

——Jug not that ye jugged. To juggernot to jug is the question. Take the negative.

——The Knights of Pythias are a strong organization in this place, and the order numbers some of our best citizens.

——The Raftsmans Journal does more gratuitous advertising, such it is for Bellefonte than any other paper out side of the county.

——We do really wonder if the scarcity of eggs is owing to the fact that so many of the country "roosters" are attending the Legislature.

——Lace handkerchiefs have become so common among the wealthy people [illegible] think they are not fashionable enough for them.

——An exchange truthfully says that it is about as wise to get mad at the editor and stop your paper as it is to refuse to get your mail because you don't like the post-master.

——A gentle reminder. The remains of the old house near the Presbyterian church, have not yet been removed. A word to the wise town council does not seem to be sufficient.

Eggs—Partridge, Cochin and Light Brahma eggs for hatching, and a few Dark Brahma and Partridge Cochin Cockerels for sale. SHORTLIDGE & Co.

——The largest sale that has been made in this section for some time past was closed by Mr. Adolph Loeb, one day last week. It was the sale of a large lot of window glass for the sum of thirty thousand dollars.

On last Saturday evening an unknown party stole a quarter of beef from a farmer in the upper end of Rush Township. We wish that the fellow who stole it and eat it might turn into a mulley steer and then get run over on the railroad by Al. Haupt's train.

——A Penns valley correspondent tells us of another large sale of timber land in Haines township. A Clearfield party purchased of George Fowler about six hundred acres of timber land. A steam saw mill will soon be erected o as to manufa cture the lumber on the lands. The new railroad is doing much to develop timber lands in that section.

——Joseph Baker, Esq., of Linden Hall, is something of a potato fancier. He had sixty varieties at the county fair last fall, and will furnish the public with seed potatoes at the following rates:—Peerless, at $1,50 per bushel and all others at $1,25. They can be had of Mr. Baker at his residence, or at the store of Sechler & Co., under the Bush House.
10-3t

——We had a delightful visit on Saturday last, from Mr. Daniel McGinley. We had often seen him but didn't know him very well. We are better acquainted now. His venerable appearance and the ominous looking book that he always carries and shows so frequently to the people on the street, led us to believe that he was a colporter or some other kind of missionary. We were not mistaken. He wanted us to assist in a charitable enterprise, he insisted and his eloquence prevailed and now we have a receipt for our taxes.

——"There were two crows." Our correspondent at Jacksonville says that he was attracted by a fearful noise made by a flock of crows in an adjoining field. Further investigation revealed a pitched battle between two crows, the rest of the flock being perched around on the ground and fences to show fair play and enjoy the fun. The plucky pair fought each other most industriously but neither gained any advantage to crow over. Sometimes they would take a little rest between rounds and then get at it again, but after a while they both fell over exhausted and, coming to the spot, our informant found them covered with mud and not with victory, just gasping their last.

——We had it too. It was an epidemic and we didn't expect to escape. The rainy, snowy, cloudy, clear, variable weather only aggravated the matter and made things worse. We mean that we have moved. Our late quarters on Alleghany street became too small for our increasing business. We now have large and very convenient apartments in the Bush House. These rooms have been devoted to newspaperdom ever since the hotel was built, excepting about one year. Many of our friends will remember that here the Bellefonte National was published by the Kinsloe Brothers, and edited by the brilliant and versatile Thad P. Stephens. This paper flourished and swelled into the Bellefonte National and Industrial Guide. They might have given some direction to Industry, but the paths followed by the paper led it neither to affluence or influence. Then we are told of a venerable looking man named Gould who succeeded them and essayed to astonish the natives, soon as he took possession. He succeeded in doing this, but the astonishment was felt more when he left than at any other time; it was that peculiar kind of astonishment which bothers the heads and accounts of business men. Here it was, and under the employment of the above named gentleman, that W. H. H. Brainard, wrote many witty and forcible articles and put new life into Gould's pulseless sheet. Then came the Bellefonte Press Company, with its half dozen religious papers and other periodical appliances for good. This was and is a success, and their new printing house and increasing business attest their ability in the particular branch of the business which they follow.

How the fickle goddess will smile on us, of course, remains to be seen, but our prospect is flattering and we are hopeful of a long and prosperous career.

CROAKING.—For some months past my ears have listened to sad, mournful tales, wrought out by a moody and morbid imagination, as it fixes its shadowy forecast on the future of our beautiful Bellefonte. Being a citizen of this historic place—the home of judges, governors, ministers of foreign courts, honorary appointee to the great Vienna Exposition, Deputy Secretary of the State, flour inspector and "sich," and the now residence of quite a number, ready to sacrifice ease and dignified retirement if Ulysses should "tip them the wink"—being then a citizen, and moved by past and present associations, I cannot give credence to the truth of these doleful and unmanly prophetic utterances. Particularly do these malignant shadows vanish as I cross the sparkling and jolly Spring Creek, and just opposite the Bush House step into the ornate and cheerful bazaar of J. Welch & Co.

Here are indications, not of decay, but of a flourishing present and heartsome future, and oranges at twenty-five cents a dozen.

——What an emporium the Bush House has become! If you get sick from the use of Beck's tobacco or Sechler's green groceries, from the saloons' vile fluids, or the careless use of Deschner's firearms, you will be cared for as a father careth for his son, by ye genial host Wilkinson, the accomplished Doctor Harris will prescribe, and that master of pharmacy, F. Potts Green, will furnish pure medicine prepared by a scientific hand, while Esquires Gray, Love and Yocum will write your will and settle your worldly effects. If you should be so unfortunate as to be gathered hence, Mrs. Dare or Miss Priest would furnish the mourning goods, Schroyer the coffin, Mrs. Pacinna the funeral music, and Calderwood will attend to the express transportation, while we will do the obituary, as handsomely as the facts will admit, in the REPUBLICAN.

——A fatal accident occurred on the Snow Shoe Railroad on last Wednesday morning. Ed. Nolan's train had reached Milesburg on its morning trip to the mountains, the usual amount of shifting and coupling was being done and the the well known good management of the employees seemed to make an accident almost impossible. Michael Kelly by some fortuitous circumstance, while about to couple some cars, was caught between them and almost instantly killed. The cars struck him just about the thighs, and the poor man was mangled fearfully. He was well known as a faithful and reliable workman. His bereaved parents reside near Milesburg.

——We saw a young lady on Linn street the other day whose waist was compressed within the limits of a belt that seemed about five inches in diameter. She was tall and fine looking in every way except this particular disfiguration. We could not help thinking that this tight lacing would engender consumption, nervous debility, dyspepsia or some other ailment, young men who are worth having, do not admire wasp like waists, they want an armful of sound, plump material to assist them it the battle of life. If our young girls, who are just budding into sunny womanhood, would avoid pale cheeks, dull eyes and red noses, let then also avoid tight lacing.

——A miniature river was improvised on Saturday last to carry off the superfluous rain water on High street. A drunken man with a carpet bag fell into it. The water flowed onward, the carpet baggage drifted gracefully down the gutter, but the man had too much ballast to float, and, after some careful deliberation, concluded to try it afoot.

——That sweet savored youth, the patent-right man, and his tuneful friend, the life insurance canvasser, are heard in the land, and the "companion volume," the delight of all households, the angelic sewing machine man, follows anon. During Mr. Irwins' sojourn in the land of Gold his many friends of Centre Co. will be glad to hear from him through the columns of the REPUBLICAN.

——When General Beaver came into our office on last Saturday morning we were surprised at his unusually pleased manner. We knew there was something up for he just acted as if there was. We thought of fruitful investments, a lucky turn in some business transaction, a "flier" in stocks or something of that kind, but the truth didn't occur to us at all, until he said he was in a hurry, he had a visitor at his house. It is a brand-new little boy.

——We notice the firm of Burnside & Thomas, merchants for many years, now located opposite the Bush House. We can speak of no one with more pleasure certainly deserving of merit and confidence. They are extensively known as dealers in first class goods and offer all the advantages of the city markets. ——Several ladies and gentlemen were taking a stroll on last Sunday afternoon along the banks of the Planing Mill dam. He was promptly rescued but he did steal very quietly to his boarding place for a change of apparel.

——At the late session of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the M. E. Church, held in Chambersburg, a very interesting presentation took place. The preachers of the Altoona District recognizing the ability and faithful service of their Presiding Elder, Rev. J. S. McMurray, who had completed four years in the District, determined to set a watch upon him in the future. They accordingly purchased a handsome chronometer from the popular and reliable establishment of Bailey & Co., Philadelphia, and made the recent session of the Conference the time of completing their arrangements. On Wednesday evening March 6th, they met in the prayer meeting room of the M. E. Church and organized by calling Rev. Thos. Barnhart to the chair. The object of the meeting was then stated. It was the intention to arrange for the presentation to take place at a later date but the reverend gentlemen happening to be in an adjacent room, he was immediately called in, and Rev. Wm. H. Dill, after a few appropriate remarks handed over an open case, containing a plain and valuable Gold Watch. It is the opinion of those present, that for the first time, Bro. McMurray was overcome. His moistened eye told the deep feeling of his heart and the few words he uttered in response, expressed the language of his soul. All were happy, but above all, the retiring Presiding Elder felt that he was among his brethren and enjoyed their confidence and love.

——Reward cards in great variety by J. Welch & Co.

——A little rumpus occurred in the saloon in the Conrad house one evening last week. Some colored young men came into the saloon to play billiards as they had been accustomed to do, but the keeper of the room refused to let them play and in forcible language requested them to leave the room. This they refused to do whereupon something of a pitched battle ensued. The keeper attempted to put them out, and calling for assistance, went to work at them in earnest, but the colored boys didn't stay "put" very easily. Billiard cues and other missiles were freely used and a considerable commotion was raised, which attracted quite a crowd. After much noise and scuffling with some broken cues and sore heads the billiard loving crowd dispersed. Just here we would say that when any person is orderly, pays for his playing, and has been in the habit of frequenting a place of this kind, and then receives the treatment that these colored boys did, we think they certainly might have cause for feeling a little rebellious. We call this billiard room man's attention to the following truisms which may be construed either as pertinent or impertinent: Billiard rooms are generally kept for the entertainment of the public; a colored man's money is always par; a man is entitled to appreciate and enjoy the game of billiards without regard to "race, color or previous condition of servitude."

BUSINESS NOTICES.

——The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York is the largest and best company in the world and the oldest Mutual Life Insurance Company in the United States. A policy costs less in this company from year to year than in any other Company. The "Mutual Life" is thirty years old. Its assets are over $60,000,000. Last year its annual Income was nearly $18,000,000. The interest on its investments more than pays its losses and expenses. The policy holders are the stock holders, there are no others. Its dividends are made annually, and are more than all the Life Insurance Companies of the United States combined, except three. J. H. Hillard, the special agent for this company is now stopping at the Brocherhoff House. Old policy holders and those designing to insure their lives, would do well to call and see him. The well known citizen Samuel Irwin are the agents of this company in this place.

☞BY ONE OF THE LEADING PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia city.—A careful examination of mortuary statistics established the fact that one adult person out of every six dies of consumption, and so alarmingly is this disease gaining the ascendancy over all other ills to which flesh is heir, that its approach to one's immediate circle is regarded with perfect horror. If you will carefully examine the records of Materia Medica you will invariably discover that the general want of success in treating diseases has not been a deficiency of pathological knowledge of the functions affected, but of a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections.

This want has at last been met in the Bitter Wine of Iron, prepared by the celebrated Dr. E. F. Kunkle, No 259 North Ninth street, Philadelphia. This excellent compound can be taken by persons with the most delicate stomach without any debilitating effect always giving strength and largely increasing the nervous energy of the patient. In all cases of pulmonary complaints it is admirably adapted to relieve the severity of the symptoms in the advanced stages of the disease, or to arrest it in its incipiency. If you want something that will give you strength, a good appetite, build up your constitution, and in place of moroseness and a lack of energy, give you a brisk and vigorous feeling, try Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron. It has already received the meed of praise from thousands who have tested its virtues, and for many years maintained its reputation with unfaded popularity.

Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, No. 259 North Ninth street, below Vine, Philadelphia.
